If you are waiting to buy your winter suit and overcoat in a CUT SALE next February or March.

You may have done this in the past and made money, but circumstances will reverse things this season and the indications now are that these items will cost more two months hence than at the present time.

Every school boy knows that all kinds of merchandise are advancing and have already advanced 25 per cent. to 33 1-3 per cent.

Why not be smart and buy your winter clothing now and get the good of them and at the same time save money?

Experienced Legislator, An Able Parliamentarian And Shrewd Manager.

Washington, Dec. 2.—The Democrats of the House have ceartainly made a good beginning in the selection of James Daniel Richardson, of Tennessee, as their floor leader. Mr. Richardson has been a member Mr. Richardson has been a member of Congress for fourteen consecutive years, and is therefore well qualified by reason of his long experience to represent his people in Congress. He is thoroughly versed in parliamentary law and will be a match for Mr. Dingley and Mr. Cannon when a party fight gets warm and interesting. Mr. Richardson seldom loses his head, and generally keeps cool, which is a splendid quality for a leader to possess. Now if Mr. Bailey, of Texas, will line up and stand by Mr. Richardson the chances are that the minority of the House will always be able to present a strong and united front ity of the House will always be able to present a strong and united front to their Republican adversaries. It has been generally conceded all along by a large majority of the members that Mr. Richardson was members that Mr. Richardson was the best man for the place, and that he was not elected on the first ballot or by acclamation was owing to umber of the members pledging their votes to friends on personal grounds. After a few ballots the caucus swung to Mr. Richardson with an enthusiasm that indicated that they were glad to nominate him. On the first ballot of the caucus Representatives Allen, Turner and Berry voted for Richardson, while Representatives theseler and Smith voted for Bankheed. On the final ballot Wheeler, Allen, Turner, Rhea and Berry Allen, Turner, Rhea and Berry voted for Richardson; Smith for Dick Coleman Burned at Stake in Maysville.

Fearful Vengeance of a Frenzied Meb Upon a Negro Rapist And Murderer.

Mayaville, Ky. Dec. 7.—Dick Coleman, the negro who outraged and murdered Mrs. Lashbrook two months ago, was brought here from Covington to-day to be placed on trial, while on the way to Courth house they were met by a mob of fully 1,000 people, headed by James Lashbrook, the husband of the murdered woman, and went immediately up Second street through the central portion of the offy to the hill, followed by fully 5,000 of the citizens of this city and county. The wretch could be heard above the cries of the mob pleading for his life.

ped; then they reached his body. The smoke filled his throat, and his cries became a gasping, chok-ing outburst.

ing outburst.

Every now and then his body would seem to gather for one supreme effort and would heave convulsively, straining andtugging but tono avail. Then he fell forward limply and hung silent while the the flames mounted higher and higher, completely enshrouding him.

Finally the bonds were burned through, and the negro fell into the flames, which slowly burned down to a heap of smouldering ashes, while the blackened sapling stood to mark the spot of the execution. The fire was allowed to die out, and then the mob gathered around to behold the charred remains.

a company that risits the city of Davenport that is more popular than the Van Dyke & Eaton Co. They are liked because they are faithful in their work and give a legitimate performance.
Their repertoire consists of good productions, up-to-date and well staged. The members of the company are well costumed, and it is safe to say that there is not a company in fifty that carries a more complete and costly wardrobe. Miss Eaton's costumes alone are valued at considerably over $3,000 and consist of some very fine novel and teautiful gowns. One gown alone cost $500, and several that run into the hundreds of dollars, another consists of over 300,000 spangles. But one could fill a column describing the different gowns of this lady

John Wesley the Great Flan of His Time.

No man lived nearer the centre than will John Wesley. Neither Clive nor Pittle neither Mansfield nor Johnson. You for cannot cut him out of our national life. No single figure influenced so many minds, no single voice touched sharp minds. many minds, no single voice touched so many hearts. No other man did such a life's work for England. As a writer he has notachieved distinction, he was no Athanasius, no Augustine, he was evef a preacher and an organ-izer, a laborer in the service of humanity; but happily for us his journals remain, and from them we can learn better than from anywhere else what manner of man he was, and the character of the times during which he lived and moved and had his being.

From "John Wesley," by AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, in the December (Christmas) Scribner's.

The cover of the December Century is suggestive of the appoaching Christmas season, the central figure of the design, by Henry Hutt; being a kneeling angel, with outspread wings. Five tints of yellow and red are harmoniously blended in the print-ing, the lettering being in black. The brief op-ning poem, "The Old Master," is decorated by Edward Etwards as illustrated by Lovid Low Edwards, an illustrated by Louis Loeb Edwards, an illustrated by Louis Loeb in a frontispiece as seasonable as the cover, and, like the cover, printed in tints. The color printing is not confined to the two examples mentioned.

"The Christmas Daucers," a poem smbodying a Saxon legend, is accompanied by several full page pictures.

mbodying a Saxon legend, is accom-nated by several full page pictures by Mr. Hutt. The holiday spirit reathes as well in Jacob A. Riis's tory of New York's East Side, "The kid Hangs up His Stockings," Dr.-Esi Michelly second View Chair Weir Mitchell's poem, 'King Christ-mas and Master New Year," the re-production of Alden Weir's "A Christ-mas Tree," in the America Artists Series, and Thomas A. Janvier's, A Provincial Christmas Postscript," be Provincial Christmas Postscript," be ing further legendary lore of Provence, derived at first had from the poets and pessants among whom the author has passed several recent years. Con-sciouous at features of the number are Cole's engraving of Sir Thom-s Lawrence's Lord Deuby, and a full-page reproduction of the bust of French's equestrain statue of Wash-ington.

RAILROAD SIGNAL COLORS.

Some Objections Raised to Those Now Prevailing.

The usual colors for railroad signals which until recently base been almost universally adopted in all civilized countries, are the following: White, to signify safety; red, to signify danger; and green, to signify caution. These colors were agreed upon at a congress of railway men held in Dirmingham in 1841. The serious objections to the use of white as a safety signal soon became evident, and have resulted in England in the universal substitution of green as the safety signal at fixed signals and the abandomment of the cautionary signals. Green, however, is still used to signify caution in the case of hand or temporary signals. The permissive block system, so widely used in this country, is not used in England, so that a cautionary signal is not there considered necessary, and in England the distant signal is simply a duplication of the home signal.

in England the distant signal is simply a duplication of the home signal. The objections to white as a safety signal are familiar to all railroad men. They are, first, that if the red lens which forms the danger signal, is broken, the light will show safety instead of danger, and second, that (as in the Whittenton accident), the danger signal may be extinguished and the engineer may mistake some other white light for the safety signal. The first objection may be in a measure and perhaps wholly obviated by the use of wire glass for the lens, nevertheless the principle seems sound that the of whe glass to the lens, nevertheless the principle seems sound that the safety signal should be a positive signal which in case of accident or doubt would show danger and not the mere absence of a danger signal.

Notwithstanding the abandonment of white as a safety signal in England, the great majority of American railroads still use this color. The principal arguments used against giving it up seem to be the following: First, that the engineers are accustomed to its use, and that any change would be dangerous, since a white light not on the railroad might be taken as a safety signal from force of habit; second, that on our railroads principally because of the extensive use of the permissive block system, it is necessary to have a signal for catioin, and it appears difficult to find a suitable color for this purpose. Blue is not suitable on account of slight visibility, particularly since the light from the usual lamp flame contains few blue or violet rays. Amber or orange has been suggested, but is objectionable as being so easily confused with red (if the tint is dark) or with white (i has been found for a third indication. The committee approves, however, the use of red for danger-stop; and green for clear—proceed; as good signal practice." In the standard rules for block and interlocking signals, adopted in the same year, the association decided on red for a danger signal, but left blank the cloors for safe-ty and cautionary signals, allowing each company to decide this for it-self. In the standard train rules, adopted in 1898, the same course was followed. The opinion seems to be gaining ground, therefore, that white ahould be abandoned as a signal color.—Hallway and Engineering Review.

Getart for Children.

Children will find much pleasure in a new go-eart which has a pair of oscillating levers pivoted to the sides of the seat, with rods leading to the front wheels for attachment on the spokes, whereby the operation of the levers turns the wheels and propels the cart.
